

American Million Dollar Pixel Site to donate $100,000 to American Charities once Owner Hits $1,000,000 Target

The American Million Dollar Homepage is set to give away $100,000 to American charities and $100,000 to some lucky advertisers on Tony Fitton's American version of the Million Dollar Homepage.

Bristol, VA (FPRC) January 14, 2006 -- American Charities set to receive $100,000 from The American Million Dollar Homepage. Tony Fitton in his quest to make a million dollars from selling pixels on his homepage will give away $100,000 to American charities and another $100,000 to some lucky advertisers on his site.

Tony aims to make his homepage a successful American version of the British Million Dollar Homepage site run by Alex Tew. Tony wants to help American Charities benefit from American Generosity. $100,000 is a sizable amount to be gained from his pixel selling homepage idea.

On his web log he also says that aims to give back $100,000 to 10 lucky advertisers on the site. The main prize being $50,000 to the top winner.

Tony started the site to earn some money for his wife and children – he says “I need to provide for my family and even if this page does not reach his target of $1,000,000 he will be happy if he gets some money to get himself some new monogrammed socks.

His site www.theamericanmilliondollarhomepage.com sells pixels for $1 each in blocks of 100. If it does as well as his British counterpart it is set to be a winner for him, for his advertisers and for American Charities.
