

UK Entrepreneur Designs Exciting New Global Advertising Opportunity

Now anyone with or without a website can advertise their existence to a global audience. All it takes is a couple of minutes visit to 'Digiboard Internet Billboard' based in the UK.

UK, April 2, 2006 (FPRC) -- Expanding on the success of the recent phenomena of pixel advertising, Joe Deacon an Internet entrepreneur from the UK has very recently launched an opportunity for anyone to advertise their presence on the Internet without spending thousands on expensive advertising campaigns. He explains "I have developed Digiboard Internet Billboard as a means for absolutely anyone with or without a website to advertise their presence on the Internet". He continues "the concept of Digiboard was designed to offer an opportunity for businesses, clubs, societies, no matter how large or small to place an ad on the Internet that suits their budget; I have also developed a section for anyone without a website to have a single page written and hosted by Digiboard, this is ideal for sole traders that are just starting out".

There are more facilities emerging on Digiboard and anyone interested should visit the website (<http://www.digiboard.co.uk>) which can be found on all major search engines. Digiboard has been active for 3 months now and when you visit you can judge for yourself its level of popularity. Digiboard is not just another pixel ad site, it is and will continue to be a very popular and sustainable place for its customers.

Presently Digiboard Internet Billboard is rapidly increasing in popularity and Joe Deacon has placed extensive importance on advertising it. It is already available globally and nationally across the UK, USA, Canada and Australia.

This concept is quite different and well thought out, take a look for your self.
