New Web Site Now Features Strange Bling

November 6, 2006 (FPRC) -- AllAmericanBling.com, the new shopping and gift web site from Vista Virtual, LLC, has added a new category that's, well, strange.

The new web site now features a category known as "Strange Bling". AllAmericanBling.com keeps consumers up with the latest bling, and introduced this new category during the Halloween season. "It will be a permanent part of our web site." said Jeff Young, spokesman for www.AllAmericanBling.com, "Not just for Halloween. 'Strange Bling' has become one of the most popular pages on our site. It's a blinging success." said Young.

The spokesman continued, "Consumers like to discover gifts that are fun, unusual, and different. They don't like to drive around looking for bling gifts at random. Clicking our site saves gas, time, and is easy. And yep, this page is fun. And strange." Young said. "Our gifts resonate with a unique character. So do our gift givers!" the spokesman continued.

The shopping and gift site is known for presenting mainstream, middle-class bling such as mp3 players, cargo pants, digital cameras, and toys. However the bling in this category is different. It's strange! Strange as in unique gifts and unusual gifts.

The "Strange Bling" category, which can be found at www.AllAmericanBling.com/StrangeBling, is one of the best at this site. It reflects the hokey hip attitude found throughout AllAmericanBling.com in the word plays and puns to be found with the product descriptions.

The strange gift bling includes a ring with an eyeball on it, carnivorous plants, She-crab Soup, and a giant rat. What could be more bling?
