Boston, MA – December 18, 2006 – TeacherVision.com, the Internet site used by 500,000 preK-12 teachers every month, is relaunching with simplified navigation, an improved internal search engine, and new content in such popular features as educational graphic organizers, printables, lesson plans, and "Great Stuff for Teachers", the bi-monthly newsletter that provides timely resources for classroom teachers.

New materials include over 5,000 articles and reviews; 1000+ lesson plans in all school subjects; 1000+ printable worksheets, "Books On The Run", inexpensive, downloadable books for all specific grade levels; and customizable, easy-to-send e-greeting cards.

Each month the "new content" section of TeacherVision.com is updated to focus on a specific area of study. These subjects cover all areas of K-12 education providing teachers a well rounded teaching resource that covers many aspects of all school subjects.

Material on the site comes from such respected education-related businesses as the Penguin Group, Pearson Scott Foresman, Pearson Prentice Hall, the National Science Teachers Association, and the Council for Exceptional Children.

"On the new TeacherVision.com, teachers can more quickly, logically, and easily find virtually anything they want to help enhance their curriculum needs," said Sue Ritchie, Director, TeacherVision.com. "We offer a comprehensive site that helps make teachers' lives and jobs easier, reducing stress while increasing productivity. And it's fun, too."

Ritchie continued, "TeacherVision.com is now positioned to welcome a new generation of teachers that bring expectations to the Internet, from design sensibilities and a demand for a wide range of resources, to formats such as podcasts, video, and interactivity."
