January 4, 2007 (FPRC) --- Atlantic City, N.J.

Atlantic City online travel entrepreneurs' Jon Talese and John Jackson see the next ten years in Atlantic City as the most ripe for growth and opportunity since they started in the business back in 1986.

Jackson and Talese sold their online Atlantic City Hotel Reservations juggernaut (AceNetHotels.com) to Hotel Reservations Network which became Hotels.com in 2001 and spent the next 40 months growing the combined Expedia.com and Hotels.com businesses. "After our commitment expired, we began seeing that Atlantic City's future had room for us once again, and we could help grow the market and contribute to our hotel partner's success with our skills in the online travel business" states Jon Talese. "Our mission is to deliver the richest source for Atlantic City vacation information, with exclusive offers available only through our website, ACHotelExperts.com"

"We have traded in our golf clubs and fishing rods for our laptops and 12 hour days", states John Jackson, co-founder and partner of <http://www.ACHotelExperts.com>

"We see Atlantic City as a destination that is continually enriching itself as an attractive gaming destination with many other options for visitors that were not available in our first twenty years of doing business in Atlantic City."

AC Hotel Experts has deep room blocks in Atlantic City casinos, hotels, motels, and condominiums where savvy online shoppers search out the resort that best suits their travel expectations. Visitors are treated to exclusive digital pictures, updated virtual tours, objective descriptions and reviews about each hotel, and even have an online concierge to assist them with special details to make their next trip extra special. "Our staff of hotel experts are answering your calls and emails right in downtown Atlantic City and have been selling these casinos and hotels for many many years." " We like to think our representatives advice and suggestions help make our guests experience better than if they had never interacted with us" states Talese. "We offer a special approach in contrast to today's online travel business's that are void of local expertise, subjective recommendations, and personal touch. We are involved in making your visit special and are here to help you with whatever questions or special needs you may have."

Atlantic City is a first class casino gaming vacation destination and we want to do our part to bring as many overnight visitors as we possibly can here to experience it. We know that once they come here and experience our new casinos, restaurants, spas and restuarants they will be back often and soon!
