

Dog Lovers Free Events Advertising Could Lead to Wedding Bells

If you're a dog lover and you're planning a dog event then the leading dating site for dog lovers may be just the place to promote it since DogLover.biz is now offering its members free advertising in addition to a free 7 day trial of its Premium Membership.

July 7, 2007 (FPRC) -- DogLover.biz founder Derek Collinson said 'Dating sites promote their own events all the time but we thought why not give our members the opportunity to advertise their own dog events or for that matter any social events or get togethers such as parties, sponsored walks, dog rescue fund raising events birthdays etc.

So we got busy and came up with a new feature that allows members to add their own events simply by clicking 'click here to add your own event' then filling in a form with the details.

Once they complete the form and click the 'submit' button their event is posted on our front page for all members to see. Then members who would like to attend an event simply click on the event title for more details then click 'Count me in' to add their name to the guest list.'

Derek believes this is an excellent way to bring single dog lovers together in a very relaxed way.

Derek added "Our members are all people who love dogs passionately and so any member event is bound to be popular. We expect to see lots of our members taking advantage of this great new feature and who knows what kind of events this might lead to in future?"

My advice to all members is to check to see that your favourite wedding outfits still fit!"
