

Working Capital Business Loan and Church Financing Commercial Mortgage Sites Published by AEX Commercial Financing Group

AEX Commercial Financing Group has published two new business financing websites addressing unique church loan and commercial mortgage issues as well as working capital business loan strategies to buy a business, refinance a business and improve cash flow for an operating business.

August 8, 2007 (FPRC) -- AEX Commercial Financing Group announced today that it has published two new business financing websites to address the unique and complex issues associated with church loan financing and working capital business loan situations. The two new sites are designed to help borrowers throughout the United States obtain improved terms for difficult working capital loan and church financing circumstances. AEX Commercial Financing Group also provides help with other specialized business financing services such as business opportunity financing and credit card processing.

According to Stephen Bush, Chief Executive Officer for AEX Commercial Financing Group, "Church financing and working capital business loan needs have become much more specialized. The unique commercial loan and working capital management problems inherent in these critical business financing functions can be handled more successfully by addressing each area separately. By publishing two individual websites for these key business financing segments, AEX will enable borrowers to zero in on the unique issues impacting each of these vital business loan components."

There are two common themes at the new AEX church loan and working capital management websites: (1) using non-traditional commercial lenders which can address unusual business loan complexities; and (2) avoiding ineffective business lenders. The AEX Church Financing website describes four common church loan difficulties and practical solutions for overcoming all of them. The AEX Working Capital Loan website discusses working capital financing approaches which are typically less costly for a business owner.

AEX Commercial Financing Group specializes in difficult business loan situations. AEX employs a proprietary working capital business loan and church loan process for evaluating business lenders and eliminating problem commercial lenders from consideration. AEX business opportunity financing can help individuals throughout the United States to buy a business or refinance a business. AEX can help with complicated business refinancing situations, especially those involving SBA loan programs. In addition to church financing, AEX Commercial Financing Group also provides commercial real estate loan financing for special purpose properties including golf courses, gas stations and funeral homes.
