

Florida City Proposes Ban on Chinese Products... Florida Pet Business Reports Which Pet Foods Contain Chinese Ingredients or US Only Ingredients.

Chinese imported wheat gluten was found to be the source of the pet food recall in March 2007. Do you know what dog foods or cat foods still contain imported ingredients? Petsumer Report does!

October 31, 2007 (FPRC) -- Tampa, FL - While Palm Bay, FL is seeking to be the first city in the US to ban Chinese products, a Tampa resident has been alerting pet owners of pet foods and treats that contain ingredients from China for months.

It's not a requirement of pet food labeling to inform pet owners if ingredients are purchased from China. As the pet food recall that began in March 2007 proved – ingredients purchased from China can be deadly to our pets.

So how do pet owners know if pet food or treats contain ingredients purchased from China? Petsumer Report.

Petsumer Report is the first pet food and pet treat publication that provides ratings of dog food, cat food, and dog and cat treats – AND provides subscribers with country of origin of ingredients. Susan Thixton, pet food expert, developed the pet food review publication from the requests of pet owners nationwide.

“If a pet food contains ingredients purchased in China – it's feed at your own risk. At the very least, pet owners deserve to know about it. Petsumer Report not only gives pet owners information about where pet food ingredients come from, but alerts them to other potentially dangerous ingredients such as by-products and chemical preservatives” says Thixton. Petsumer Report also informs subscribers of higher quality ingredients such as human grade pet food ingredients and added health bonuses like proteinated minerals and probiotics.

Petsumer Report currently has ratings and ingredient information on over 300 pet foods and treats. At least 40 new products are added monthly. Future plans are to provide similar 'petsumer' information on pet toys, bedding, and various other pet supplies. A yearly subscription to the online magazine is $15.37. Subscribers are provided 24/7 access to reviews.
