November 13, 2007 (FPRC) --

Educational Software Technologies is please to announce that a new a revamped version of the website will be launched later this month. The site will feature a completely new look and feel, but sell the same products our customers depend upon. This includes our well respected TOEFL iBT, CBT, and PBT software test products. The new site will allow for a much more streamlined and easier ordering. Returning customers will appreciate the new graphical interface.

The new site will prominently display Educational Software Technologies top selling products such as the GRE mock test, CAT GRE test, and GRE Vocabulary software. This will allow our customers will be able to find the appropriate prep software and tests much easier than ever before.

Included in this launch will be our company's new logo. Educational Software Technologies is constantly improving upon its brand image while simultaneously improving the GMAT prep software and other applications. Of course we will continue to offer GMAT Flashcards and our GRE Wordlist, which is in many ways similar to the GRE Kaplan tests and software.

As part of the launch the company is encouraging customer feedback. Therefore, we will promptly respond to additional feature request by visitors to the site. This includes requests related to the site design, layout, and of course the presentation of our English language software and other testing programs.

Educational Software Technologies is based in India, allowing the company to cost effectively service customers across the Globe. The new website launch is only one of the many initiatives Educational Software Technologies is taking to improve its service and products. The company plans to remain one of the leading providers of Wordlist Flashcards, while breaking new grounds in the TOEFL iBT software market.
