

Mortgage Broker Training and Business Loan Referral Fee Program Offered by AEX Commercial Financing Group

AEX Commercial Financing Group is offering a Mortgage Broker Training Program combined with a Business Loan Referral Fee Program.

December 20, 2007 (FPRC) --

AEX Commercial Financing Group (AEX) has developed a specialized and practical Loan Officer Training and Referral Fee Program which should be timely for residential mortgage loan brokers who have experienced a significant reduction in their business income level. The AEX Program will provide business advisors with new and effective alternatives for helping their clients and prospects.

The AEX Referral Fee Program allows individuals either licensed or unlicensed to refer business loan candidates and receive compensation upon completion of financing. With this program, AEX performs all of the required work, so it is not necessary for the referring advisor to have any knowledge of business financing. With the AEX Mortgage Broker Training Program, an expedited fee-based service that helps prospective commercial mortgage loan officers acquire essential skills is being offered by AEX Commercial Financing Group.

According to Stephen Bush, Founder and Chief Executive Officer for AEX Commercial Financing Group, "Our firm has developed a new program to help business advisors perform at the highest possible level for their clients and also get fairly compensated for doing so. Recent turmoil in the residential mortgage financing market has displaced many financial advisors who are now seeking to replace lost income with commercial mortgage and business financing programs. Unfortunately the complex structure for commercial real estate investment financing and commercial loan services can make this a difficult transition. AEX can help to expedite the start-up process for interested individuals throughout the United States."

Please contact Steve Bush at AEX Commercial Financing Group to address all questions concerning these services. AEX is based in Ohio and provides specialized commercial real estate and business financing programs.
