In addition to talking about the new album, Vince shares some of his musical background and his views about the changes in the music business that have occurred with the advent of instant downloads via the internet. He also has some good advice for fellow artists;

"Musicians need to be their own promoters." he advises. Vince goes on to say that, in this day and age, musical artists must be very pro-active about promoting themselves which is something they tend not to be inclined to do. None the less, they must learn to be self promoters.
