April 17, 2008 (FPRC) -- Today MacUpdate released details of their new MacUpdate Parallels bundle. The bundle is priced at $64.99 instead of $474.76, a savings of over $409 (when all 10 apps are unlocked).

When you purchase bundles now, you'll be the immediate owner of Hazel, Art Text, MenuCalendarClock, Leap, StoryMill, Typinator and DVDRemaster Pro. Then when the Mac community spreads the word and reaches 5,000 bundles sold, Sound Studio will be unlocked into the bundle for free. People that purchase the bundle before each unlock milestone will have the unlocked products automatically added to their accounts for free. Because of the superb success of the Mac community in the last 2 bundles, we fully expect to reach all 3 unlock milestones during the 2-week span of this event.

In 2007, MacUpdate and partnering developers sold over 27,000 bundles, hitting record volume unseen anywhere else during the year. It was a superb year for everyone who participated in the fun events. This year, the Parallels bundle is expected to become the biggest online Mac software event ever seen. You can join in the fun and access a unique combination of newly released titles and some of the best high quality apps created by our passionate developer friends. This new bundle is priced lower than the cost of Parallels by itself!

The mupromo.com website advises users to "continue to revisit MUPromo to check the status of unlocks and see what else develops during this 2-week period."

It also warns that "there are no time extensions".
