

Tracesmart Corporate Offer ICM members A Series of Benefits

The Institute of Credit Management (ICM) are offering excellent benefits to their members in 2008, namely the opportunity to trial industry leading Tracesmart Corporate and their extensive consumer data solutions.

June 3, 2008 (FPRC) --Announced in June's issue of Credit Management magazine, Tracesmart Corporate are offering members of the Institute of Credit Management (ICM) a series of benefits throughout 2008. The benefits will allow members of the ICM the opportunity to trial Tracesmart Corporate services and receive a range of discounts.

The first of the series enables ICM members to test-drive the company's online debtor tracing tool, which is also known as Tracesmart Corporate. The ability to trace people quickly and simply is key within the credit industry - especially the collections sector. Tracesmart Corporate is one of the most effective ways to complete this task - it is already the choice of many tracing agents up and down the country - and by offering ICM members the opportunity to trial it for free Tracesmart Corporate hope to demonstrate this to the industry as a whole.

Tracesmart Corporate will be continuing the series by offering ICM members the opportunity to trial a number of other services in their range, Michael Trezise, Managing Director explains "Whilst the provision of our online tracing tool is what we are best known for in the credit industry, it is only one of the many services in our portfolio. We provide both a data cleansing solution, which was developed with credit industry in mind, and an online system for conducting identity checks. Following discussions with the ICM, both parties agreed that these would also be services that could benefit ICM members and will be featured in future benefits."

Commenting for the ICM, Director General Philip King noted "We are always looking at ways to add value to membership, and negotiating benefits with key companies in the credit industry is an important way of doing this. The series of benefits being offered by Tracesmart Corporate is an important addition to our membership package, and we look forward to working with them in the future."
