

Triple Diamond Recordings In Talks To Sign New Band 'The Progress of Energy'

Triple Diamond Recordings are in talks to sign new local band, The Progress of Energy. The band is poised to accept a contract to help them become the next big thing in the music world.

July 28, 2008 (FPRC) -- Triple Diamond Recordings announces their intentions to sign new band 'The Progress of Energy' to their recording label. The independent studio has been scouring clubs and bars looking for new talent to sign.

The Progress of Energy has made a name for themselves locally, playing in bars and clubs. CD sales have been slow and most of the band's time has been spent writing new material for their live shows. At one of their recent performances, they caught the eye of Tim Ryder, a Triple Diamond talent scout who was looking for the next big thing.

'I knew instantly that The Progress of Energy was a band we needed to represent. Their mix of different music styles creates a sound no one else has. They also write all their own songs which make them attractive to any recording studio. We feel very fortunate that we were able to discover them before other studios and are confident that we'll be able to create a great partnership,' said Ryder of Triple Diamond Recordings.

If the contract negotiations go well, The Progress of Energy will become one of Triple Diamond's newest talents, joining many other bands that have found success in the local music market. With Triple Diamond Recordings assistance, the band hopes to break into the national music scene. The band has been performing together locally for three years and met while working together. Since then, band members have gone on to different jobs, but still come together to write music, practice and perform.

'We're looking forward to finishing the money talks so we can get into Triple Diamond's recording studio. Their studio is state of the art and we can't wait to use their equipment,' said Tony Mooney, lead singer of The Progress of Energy.
