

Law School Directory Launches

New law school discussion site launches, will feature free help from law school admissions professionals.

August 18, 2008 (FPRC) -- Las Vegas, NV -- After spending the last few years building educational website geared towards prospective students based in the United States, D & B Media Ventures LLC is now expanding its educational offerings to include a new law school discussion site.

The Law School Admissions Insider site is now available to the nation via their website, <http://www.lawschooldiscussion.net>. The Law School Admissions Insider aims to put prospective law students in touch with both their peers and with law school admissions professionals. According to Pat Bergin, Director of Marketing, \"we've reached out to law school admissions counselors and admissions deans and asked them to participate on the discussion boards. So far, the response has been quite positive.\\

To date, D & B Media Ventures has developed three additional law school sites: <http://law-school-secrets.com>, <http://law-school.tv>, and <http://lawschoolreference.com>. The company, based in Las Vegas, Nevada, is dedicated to providing high quality educational quality on the internet.

Admission to law schools in the United States is becoming more and more difficult. Law schools, according to Bergin "are becoming more selective merely to improve their superficial law school rankings." Keeping low scoring students out, means that their rankings will not go down. Thus, "students need to be prepared to do everything possible to ensure their own success, and this website should be part of any plan." For more information or advertising inquiries please contact us at support@lawschoolreference.com.

Contact Information

For more information contact Pat Bergin of D & B Media Ventures LLC (<http://dbmediaventures.com>) 702-975-4112

Keywords

law school

law school discussion

law schools

You can read this press release online here