

New Coalition Brings Revival for Church Bodies of the Protestant Faith

The Protestant Reformation Revisited Coalition has launched a new website that promotes the prophetic teachings and messages of the protestant reformers and brings revival to church bodies of the Protestant Faith who are the descendants of The Sixteenth Century Protestant Reformation

December 15, 2008 (FPRC) -- The Protestant Coalition Revisited Coalition has taken its mission for the revival of the major truths and biblical prophetic teachings taught by and held dear to the protestant reformers, and expanded the idea of a united protestant faith. This united protestant faith is centered on the dual message of The Sixteenth Century Protestant Reformation taught by the protestant reformers of the sixteenth century which, 1) reveals the apostate power of biblical prophecy and 2) and place emphasis on righteousness by faith in Jesus Christ.

Today, The Protestant Reformation Revisited Coalition launched the TPRRC.ORG website that promises to bring to an international audience of protestant believers information critical to the mission of the protestant reformers of the sixteenth century. The three major schools of prophetic interpretation and their origins are presented together along with the purpose for each school and the source of origination for the interpretation that is taught. Not only can believers learn of the three major schools of prophetic interpretation, but they can also purchase Christian publications and receive free supplemental prophetic booklets prepared with the protestant reformers method of interpretation and teachings held as the basic method of prophetic interpretation. These publications and supplemental booklets are made available through the site and are embedded in a central theme of the second coming of Jesus Christ and the biblical prophetic messages from Jesus the revelator to be given right before his return.

James L. Coleman Jr, the founder of The Protestant Reformation Revisited Coalition, believes wholeheartedly in a global protestant revival that includes as its mission the revival of the prophecies taught by the protestant reformers of the sixteenth century through distribution of Christian publications, bible commentaries and major line of prophecy supplemental booklets. He has transformed the idea into a newsletter and presence on the World Wide Web.

James feels that the success of The Protestant Reformation Revisited Coalition will be in the knowledge it brings to the protestant community through the newsletter and website. He believes visitors will continue to come back for current and up-to-dated information presented periodically on the "Sentinel on The Wall" pages of the website and the ability to become involved in the mission of the coalition made available through the "Member Opportunities" page. Tentative enhancements to the site will allow believers to enhance their profile, network with others, read product reviews, or even to chat in the live chat room. This is obviously an attractive option for believers to become a part of a united protestant faith and fellowship.

For more information, please visit the website at tprrc.org.

Contact Information

For more information contact James L. Coleman Jr. of The Protestant Reformation Revisited

Coalition (<http://tprrc.org>)
678-499-2911

Keywords

Protestant

Faiths

Church

You can read this press release online here