February 19, 2009 (FPRC) -- LOS ANGELES, CA - House of Memory, the online superstore selling desktop and laptop computer memory, hard drives and computer parts, announces the launch of its new website.

The website's built in computer memory RAM finder tool make it simple for customers to find the exact memory for computer models of all types.

House of Memory offers a massive selection of specific products such as Gateway memory upgrades or Samsung memory flash drives. While many other memory companies offer just a few products, House of Memory sells over 10,000 memory upgrades for more than 50,000 systems.

The company's exclusive 'system hardware check and memory finder' means customers buy the right products the first time, without any hassle.

"Many of our competitors have a one-size-fits-all approach to computer memory. They'll sell memory without understanding the technical aspect of it, meaning customers may not get exactly what they need," said Azad Feliv, founder and president of House of Memory (<http://www.houseofmemory.com/>).

"It's possible to have two of the same memory modules each built with a different chip configuration. Because of this, Apple memory upgrades may not work on HP memory upgrades. Most companies know this, but don't care so customers are stuck with memory that may not work when installed," explained Feliv

House of Memory first specialized in Apple computer memory upgrades. The company soon expanded to include other brands of PCs. House of Memory's entire inventory comes with a lifetime warranty and a 100% compatibility guarantee so customers never have to worry about the products working in existing computers.

Unlike some online resellers, House of Memory never repackages used memory and sells it as a new product, a practice that's common throughout the memory business.

"All our products like Dell computer memory, HP Pavilion memory, Compaq RAM memory and Toshiba laptop RAM are new and warrantied so that customers purchasing computer memory RAM know they're getting a first rate product at an excellent price. Our employees are all computer experts and have the knowledge to help our customers, no matter how big or small their questions are. We work hard to develop a relationship with our customers and they know they can trust us and the products we sell," said Feliv.

About House of Memory: House of Memory (<http://www.houseofmemory.com/>) is an online computer memory RAM superstore offering 10,000 memory upgrades for more than 50,000 systems. The experts at House of Memory have years of experience selling high quality, major brand memory products to consumers around the world. House of Memory is passionate about quality and customer services. Living by their motto, 'Sell quality products at competitive prices, and provide the same kind of customer service to our customers that we would expect from others,' has made House of Memory one of the most trusted sources for computer memory online.
