February 25, 2009 (FPRC) -- From Jackie O to Michelle Obama – Pearls are making a come back from Coast to Coast.

Once again the eyes of the nation are watching the biggest celebrities of all. The Obamas took Washington by storm in their casual outfits that reflect their roots, but the Obama girls were all lady. The campaign, inauguration and the subsequent party circuit saw Michelle as well as the girls dressed to the nines on more than one occasion.

The First Lady has shown her fondness for pearls more than once, and it can be assumed that her daughters will follow in her steps as far as fashion is concerned.

Many president's wives have worn pearls almost as a trademark - from Jackie's legendary choker to the Barbara and Laura's simple strands. It's not just the wife of the 'most powerful man in the world' wearing pearls - other power suits in the capitol are topping it off with pearl jewelry on a regular basis. Feinstein sported a strand of huge white marble sized pearls to set off her bright outfit at the inauguration itself. Hilary, stepping up to fill the shoes of the Secretary of State wears her pearls proudly, as does Nancy Pelosi, the Speaker of the House.

With all of these high power women setting the example, pearls are in demand. With the economy struggling however, many women may feel they can't afford the expense as in a regular jewelry store.
