

Stradalli Cycles Favorite With Special Forces Lieutenant Colonel

Blain Reeves, a Lieutenant Colonel with the U.S. Army Special Forces and keen athlete has told the designers of Stradalli road and track bikes that he is a huge fan.

October 3, 2009 (FPRC) -- The Stradalli Cycle Company recently found out that Blain Reeves, a Lieutenant Colonel with the U.S. Army Special Forces and a passionate cycling athlete, is an owner of two Stradalli bicycles: a time trial bike and a road bike. Blain, who did a tour in Iraq, is well known in the military ranks for winning the 1993 "Best Ranger" competition, a prestigious and gruelling three day multi-event endurance competition ranked as one of the toughest in the world.

The makers of Stradalli Bicycles and Blain recently talked and Blain was happy to praise the Stradalli carbon bikes. Stradalli Cycle recently launched their new carbon concept bicycle the Milano Strada-PRO. Using ultra-light carbon fiber components the frame weight is just 997g but yet has a tensile strength of 50 tons per square cm, the Milano Strada-PRO is a revolution in high performance bicycles.

"That's my weapon of choice," Blain said when commenting about his Stradalli. After riding Stradalli for a few months, riding my other bike felt like riding a tank. I am convinced that Stradalli is the best bike out there."

Blain, who only just recently retired from the U.S. Army, spent a year in combat in Iraq during Operation Iraqi Freedom with the 101st Airborne Division. Lieutenant Colonel Reeves has also completed many of the most physically and mentally demanding schools the military has to offer including the US Army Ranger School, Special Forces Combat Diver Course (US Navy Buds/SEAL School equivalent) and the Army's Advanced Land Navigation Course.

Outside of the army, Blain Reeves is a local sporting hero in South Florida where he has lived since 2004. Blain was South Florida's Adventurer of the year 2007 and won the USAT South Florida Duathlon Series in 2005, 2006 and 2007 as well as other major competitions.

The Stradalli Cycle Company has a passion for cycling and building bicycles for the keen athlete just like Blain Reeves. Their design team is made up of specialists with over 15 years of high-tech design and manufacturing of race quality motorcycle components and cyclists with over forty years of competitive cycling experience.

Stradalli Cycle wish Blain all the best in the future and hope that his Stradalli bicycles bring him success and enjoyment.
