

The Lift Chair Guide Implements New Site Design

The Lift Chair Guide recently underwent a site redesign, which is intended to help make information more accessible and easier to find for visitors. These changes help to make the site easier to use and expand on the existing Resource Centers, so that users can take advantage of the wealth of information found on the Lift Chair Guide.

November 8, 2009 (FPRC) -- The Lift Chair Guide, which is the number one source for information about lift chairs and other senior health issues, has implemented a new site design. The overall content and theme of this elderly care site is, of course, still the same, but it is now laid out in a manner that is designed to help make finding the right information much easier.

The biggest change to the elderly health site is that a set of handpicked consumer guides, such as the Lift Chair Measurement Guide, the Lift Chair Buying Guide, and information about lift chair manufacturers, has been brought to the front page, instead of being found in the Lift Chair Resource Center. This is designed to make these important tools more visible to visitors of the site, so that they can take advantage of them. However, they remain in the resource center section as well, which is designed to address health concerns for seniors and the elderly.

Steve, one of the chief authors at the Lift Chair Guide, said "I think this is an important step in making the site easier to use and more user friendly. The redesign helps to bring the important information, like our Lift Chair Buying Guide, to the attention of those who need it most, the consumer. I am really excited about how this change will help the flow of the site."

The Lift Chair Guide is a site dedicated to providing seniors, the elderly, and their caretakers accurate information about living aids, like lift chairs and bath lifts, as well as some of the diseases and conditions found among the elderly. In addition to covering dementia and arthritis, a complete Medicaid Website Directory can also be found. With over 10 years experience in the medical industry, the staff of the Lift Chair Guide is dedicated to providing accurate and unbiased information.
