'The Beginner's Guide to Private Equity Jobs' provides an essential resource to help early career professionals navigate their private equity job search.

November 18, 2009 (FPRC) -- SAN DIEGO, CA – Job Search Digest, a web-based career service company that provides listings of investment jobs in niche markets, has published The Beginner's Guide to Private Equity Jobs.

The educational article gives an overview of the private equity jobs search process, what skills are required, typical responsibilities, and gives a step-by-step guide on how to approach the job hunt for private equity careers.

"Given the current economy, there are more and more investment executives looking for positions, so if you are going to be successful, it's important to focus on your niche. Private equity jobs are some of the best compensated career choices in the marketplace today with an annual compensation package of $200,000 for associate-level jobs and ranging into the millions for partner-level positions," said David Kochanek, publisher of Job Search Digest.

Job Search Digest helps private equity investment professionals become more effective in their job search. The company monitors all of the online job boards (including the specialty niche sites) and captures the most relevant private equity and venture capital jobs.

Job Search Digest enables executives to free up their time to network and interview by doing the legwork for them. The subscription-based service provides up-to-date listings of the best jobs currently available in the private equity and venture capital fields. Subscribers get detailed listings of private equity careers from every online job source, access to exclusive jobs from niche recruiters and hiring firms, and are able to connect with private equity recruiters from around the world all while saving valuable time.

"Every day we research the web to find every private equity job that's been posted in the last 24 hours. We then filter the listings, categorize them, and make it easy for our members to find jobs that are a good fit. There is simply no other service like it on the Web," said Kochanek.

In addition to the detailed private equity job listings, premium subscribers also receive the 'Private Equity Compensation Guide' and the 'Private Equity Careers Guide'. These guides sell for a combined value of $130 and are included in a paid membership.
