

Dive Center Offering Customers Hotel-Dive Packages for 2010 Key West Peak Season

This upcoming 2010 Key West vacation season the Key West Dive Center will begin offering their customers special hotel and diving packages

December 10, 2009 (FPRC) -- Travelers coming to Key West Florida for next year's vacation season who are looking to experience the world of Key West diving can now plan a full vacation with the leading center for Key West diving trips, the Key West Dive Center.

The dive center has been providing visitors with Key West scuba diving experiences for several years. They operate a centralized web-based center for information and bookings for regular morning and afternoon scuba diving trips, certification courses, instruction classes, and Key West snorkeling trips. Recently, they have expanded to add the popular dolphin and snorkeling trips.

This upcoming season, the center will also begin providing hotel and diving packages to their customers which will consist of a stay at one of the historic downtown Key West hotels as well as one or more Key West diving trips.

The Key West diving trips that will be included in the package can be the regular diving trips for certified divers (either the morning wreck dives or the afternoon reef dives) or they can be one of the instruction courses (including certification, referral, and dive-in-a-day courses).

The center will put together your trip and accommodations for you so you can book a packed Key West vacation in one central location.

"It's something a lot of our customers have been asking about for a while, where we can recommend they stay. Now we have our favorite hotels and inns on board so we can send our customers to them directly," explains Key West Dive Center office manager Eddie Zimmerman.

The dive and hotel packages will be available just in time for the upcoming Key West peak season starting this January. Key West scuba diving and Key West snorkeling are two of the most popular activities visitors in the country's southernmost island.
