

ShortSaleGA.com Has Found A New Home To Better Help Sell Homes

ShortSaleGA.com has now joined with Keller Williams Community Partners to expand its territory and bring quality, professional realtors closer to the people in need. By teaming with a larger network of realtors, ShortSaleGA.com hopes to help more people avoid foreclosures.

January 25, 2010 (FPRC) -- ShortSaleGA.com has now joined with Keller Williams Community Partners to expand its territory and bring quality, professional realtors closer to the people in need. Each Keller Williams office is independently owned and operated, but as a family they share the same high standards of communication and service.

ShortSaleGA.com felt this move helped address the rising rate of foreclosures in Georgia this past year. By teaming with a larger network of realtors, ShortSaleGA.com hopes to help more people avoid foreclosures!

How does this help sell homes?

With a nationally known brokerage, a home is networked with hundreds of other Keller Williams agents locally and throughout the United States. Keller Williams is syndicated with multiple websites to give the seller an optimized listing and expose the home to more potential buyers.

By ShortSaleGA.com teaming with local agents, it helps promote homes with realtors who understand the particular needs of the community.

What's the next step?

Those who are facing a hardship or are aware of future financial distress that may affect their home, feel free to call and discuss possible options.

ShortSaleGA.com can help sell a home—even if the home has NO equity, needs repair, is behind on payments, or even facing foreclosure—at no cost to the seller! The lender/mortgage company pays for the realtor's commission and closing cost.
