

Natural Resources Pest Control Announces Organic Whitefly Control Service for South Florida Consumers

Natural Resources Pest Control announces additional organic whitefly control service offerings.

February 3, 2010 (FPRC) -- Many home owners and commercial property managers are dealing with the devastating destruction of ficus caused by the whitefly pest in south Florida. Natural Resources Pest Control has announced organic whitefly control services which are environmentally friendly and guaranteed to control whitefly.

Without giving away the Company's treatment ingredients, the organic whitefly control mix consists primarily of concentrated soaps and essential plant oils. This topical treatment has been tested and successfully eliminating whitefly since November 2008.

"Establishing an organic practice for controlling whitefly was detrimental," states Christopher Moreschi vice president. "There is so much ficus being treated with additional pesticides by inexperienced applicators and home owners. Since whitefly is a new pest to south Florida we must implement ways to treat it that won't be harmful to the environment."

Organic whitefly control services are offered by Natural Resources as affordable monthly or bi-monthly treatments. The Company caters to both residential and commercial clients from Miami to Palm Beach.
