

Calusa Creek Has Many Cold Hardy Palms Available to the Wholesale Trade

Calusa Creek Tree Farm have a very long list of cold hardy palms that are available.

March 1, 2010 (FPRC) -- Stuart, FL -- Florida nurseries were hit unusually hard by the cold weather this year. The mercury dipped below 30 degrees and stayed there for several days continuously. There is no denying that the wholesale tree supply industry was devastated this year.

But the good news is that Calusa Creek Tree Farm, which is ideally nestled along the banks of the St. Lucie River in south central Florida, fared better than most nurseries, and they still have a large supply of cold hardy trees and palms available for immediate shipment.

If you are looking for Florida-grown Coconuts, Royals, Adonidias, or Foxtail palms not burned by the recent cold snaps, look no further than Calusa Creek Tree Farm.

"We were fortunate" stated Paul Soijka (General Manager of Calusa Creek) "our 600 acres held up well. Our experienced nursery staff did an admirable job of protecting our inventory of containerized and field grown trees and palms. I want the wholesale landscape trade to know we are ready to ship quality plant material today".

Calusa Creek remains committed to supplying the industry with the best plant materials, even in these difficult times. Our staff is knowledge in all areas of land scape, and we are eager to furnish the wholesale trade with fast friendly service. Our plants are featured in some of the most high end landscapes of office buildings and shopping malls throughout the nation and abroad. We are particularly proud of our success of shipping plant material throughout the Caribbean.

Contact Information

For more information contact Paul Soijka of Calusa Creek Tree Farm (<http://calusacreek.com>)
772 219-3377

Keywords

tree farm

cold hardy

palms

You can read this press release online here