

RecruiterBuddy Announces Enhancements To Sleuth Tool

Already very well known for their low-cost, many features, and easy to use interface, RecruiterBuddy announced yet another enhancement to their affordable web-based recruiting tool! An 'import' button has been added to the candidate sourcing tool known as the Sleuth Tool which will allow RecruiterBuddy users to import sourced resumes.

March 3, 2010 (FPRC) -- The RecruiterBuddy Sleuth Tool works by sourcing for candidate resumes across thousands of resources- including internet engines, social media websites, blogs, internet resume databases, and RecruiterBuddy's own private database of several thousand job seekers. The returned results have been described by many as 'staggering', and those returned to the user are only those specific to the skills sought out by the user. RecruiterBuddy users can then review the returned resumes that were sourced by the Sleuth Tool and choose to import those resumes directly into their RecruiterBuddy database. The imported document is automatically parsed by RecruiterBuddy's Resume Parser which creates a new contact record with the address, email, phone number, and candidate skills set fields already completed and the resume attached to the new candidate file! RecruiterBuddy continues to add features to its already immensely popular recruiting software tool almost weekly, and they pledge to continue their enhancements on a regular basis.

RecruiterBuddy is 100% web-based no matter where you are in the world, as long as you have web access you have your sources. There is nothing to download and no servers to maintain with the RecruiterBuddy System. Users of the RecruiterBuddy system are praising the sourcing tools, CV parser, and contact management as well as its low cost. At a base cost of fifty dollars a month with no long-term commitment requirements, RecruiterBuddy is a very affordable office tool. Because they are confident that you will find RecruiterBuddy to be an invaluable tool, RecruiterBuddy is offering a free trial to interested parties.
