

Custom-Made Guitars: N' Stuff Music Announces New Line of Hand-Crafted Wooden Guitars

Hand-crafted wooden electric and acoustic guitars are now being offered at N' Stuff Music Store, part of a new line of hand-made guitars by Michael Caldwell, luthier.

April 3, 2010 (FPRC) -- N' Stuff Music Store is pleased to announce its new, custom-made line of hand-crafted wooden guitars. The hand-made acoustic guitars and electric guitars are crafted in-store by luthier, Michael Caldwell, and can be custom-built, according to the customer's specifications. Musicians may select a Caldwell original from the music store's online inventory, purchase in-store or order by phone.

The hand-made guitars have USA-Made body and necks, nitro finishes, with a signature custom wooden pickguard. According to Justin Sarra, N' Stuff Music's Sales Manager, the hand-made guitars feel and sound like a three or four thousand dollar custom guitar from Fender, Paul Reed Smith, or John Suhr, but for about half of the cost, ranging from only $1,000-$2,000.

Mr. Caldwell, luthier, has more than 35 years of experience in custom wood restoration and guitar repair, and has served as head luthier of N' Stuff's Repair Department since 1979. Mr. Caldwell's expertise in guitar building and restoration includes electronic repair and installation, custom finishing and color matching, and finish repair. He is an authorized service technician for Martin, Taylor, Gibson, Fender, Guild, Alvarez, Ibanez, ESP, Warwick and Ovation guitars. His experience includes factory on-site intensive training.

Using Mr. Caldwell's extensive background and knowledge, N' Stuff Music will offer customers the opportunity to custom-build the guitar of their dreams, select a one-of-a-kind Caldwell original guitar from the existing inventory, or fine-tune or repair their favorite piece.
