April 23, 2010 (FPRC) -- Most people dream of the day when they will be able to leave their jobs and retire. But recent research reveals less than half of American workers have calculated how much money they will need to be able to retire. Moreover, 70 percent feel they will continue to work for pay in their retirement and 50 percent have less than $25,000 saved for retirement. This information continues to affirm the need for financial education and is exactly why Snider Advisors, a leading provider of financial education, has released their Retirement Preparedness Checklist.

Kim Snider, Founder and CEO of Snider Advisors created the Retirement Preparedness Checklist. Snider says, "Too many people have taken a hands-off approach to their financial situation. But it's time for them to have a sense of urgency about getting their financial house in order." She continues, "It's time for people to be intentional about every dollar they spend and save."

The Retirement Preparedness Checklist offers step-by-step guidance and realistic advice on how to be prepared for life without a paycheck. This valuable to-do list is available as an article, video and podcast. The information is delivered with Snider's unique ability to simplify the complexities of financial issues. Regardless of portfolio size or experience level, anyone who would like to someday retire will benefit from this information.
