

Caledonian Management Opens Offices in London And Tokyo

Caledonian management sees Japan and United Kingdom as next logical locations to expand their jobs building programs

May 17, 2010 (FPRC) -- Dallas, TX: The Caledonian operation that started in Delaware, and spread to Texas and Illinois, is now crossing both the Atlantic and Pacific with new office locations in London and Tokyo. 'Japan is the second largest economy in the world, so it made sense for Caledonian to reach out there,' says Caledonian partner, Chris Ducret. 'And United Kingdom is not only the sixth largest economy in the world, but it opens us up to all of Europe. We have great resource partners in both locales and look to grow with them.'

The Resource Partners saw how the Caledonian Programme has been elevating clients from critical, in terms of continuing business operations, to profitable, by implementing objective, waste cutting initiatives that provided bottom line savings. 'By cutting waste and inefficiency, Caledonian has not only helped those 'critical care' clients save jobs, but create additional jobs at a time when many businesses feel that casting jobs aside is their only means of survival,' explains Ducret. 'Our partners see the technologies we have available and the methodologies we have honed as forward thinking. Those partners in London and Tokyo want to bring that forward thinking to the business arenas in their respective countries.'

With the issues the European Union (EU) is facing, private sector growth is needed to balance the increase in public spending and the demands for additional taxation and revenue. 'The EU shows us the importance of creating more private sector jobs to help stave off the 'sacrifices' that will be required,' says Ducret in a serious tone. 'We look at business issues in a pragmatic, not political, way. Activity, productivity, and profit are the catalysts that serve to expand economies.'
