

Phonebooth Introduces Flexible Small Business Phone Systems Without Long Term Contracts

Phonebooth, a provider of voice over Internet office phone systems, introduces affordable pricing and month-to-month contracts for today's small business owners. Free business phone numbers and unlimited conferencing are two benefits included in their low pricing.

November 3, 2010 (FPRC) -- CARY, NC – Phonebooth, a Voice over Internet telephone service provider, is offering simple pricing and low cost solutions to small businesses with its new month to month service. By eliminating long term contracts, the company aims to provide small business owners with quality phone system solutions that are flexible and scaleable.

"We understand the budget limitations of small businesses and want to provide them with a superior system that will address their needs at prices they can afford. Our current month-to-month service is a bargain at just $20 per month per user, including unlimited nationwide calling, unlimited conference calls, voice mail transcriptions, and excellent customer support. We're proud to offer a small business phone system that has the flexibility usually only found in large scale phone systems," explains Chris Moody, Product Marketing Manager for Phonebooth.

The new month-to-month pricing model is ideally suited to small businesses. Phonebooth offers a variety of options, including a free business phone number and the flexibility to scale up or down according to individual needs. Clients can tailor the number of phone lines supported by Phonebooth to meet seasonal needs, cover extra employees during rush periods, or adjust to changes in their workforce. It takes just a few minutes to set up the system, and less time than that to add or remove users or activate the voicemail system as needed. For added accessibility, the Phonebooth virtual receptionist is designed to give even the smallest businesses the feel and sound of an established, successful company.

An intuitive Web 2.0 interface is easy to learn and use for everyone on the Phonebooth system. Businesses also have the choice to purchase phones through Phonebooth or provide their own phones for the same low price per month, eliminating the need to factor the price of costly hardware into their phone system budgets. In fact, Phonebooth offers many of the key features of a larger, landline based business phone system without the need for any additional hardware.

"Small businesses won't have to invest in costly hardware or landlines and they will continue to get outstanding telephone reception that's equal to or surpasses landline reception. With no long-term contracts, businesses can now compare Phonebooth to other office phone systems by actually trying our system for themselves without worrying about early termination fees. We're confident small business owners will try the Phonebooth system and appreciate its many features, including the ability to transfer calls, a professional voice mail greeting, and voice-to-text email transcription," concludes Moody.
