Ivan Dominguez to ride the Stradalli Milano full carbon road bike during 2011.

January 3, 2011 (FPRC) -- Miami, Florida - Stradalli Cycle, the high performance carbon bicycle manufacturer, is pleased to announce that Ivan Dominguez, the professional road bicycle racer and winner of the Pan Am Games, will use the Stradalli Milano during 2011.

Ivan Dominguez, who has the nickname "the Cuban Missile", will use his Stradalli Milano as of January 1st 2011. The Milano is one of the most popular race grade carbon fiber frames offered by Stradalli. The Milano is equipped with a BB30 bottom bracket with a stiffer, more rigid design which translates into faster acceleration and less wasted energy, as well as a beefy tapered head tube for increased lateral stiffness.

"We have teamed up with Ivan Dominguez with aggressive plans and motivated partners who are excited about the compelling sport of cycling," said Stradalli President Tom Steinbacher. "We want to further build on this platform and recruit leading technology and lifestyle companies to work alongside our existing partners."

The Milano Frame is the same frame that will be used for the 2011 international racing season by 2010 World Cup Masters Champion Grant Potter.

About Ivan Dominguez

Dominguez was born in Cuba where he rode for the Cuban National Team . He moved to the USA in 1998 (and became a US citizen in February of 2009) and within three years turned professional with the Saturn Pro Cycling Team and quickly became known as one of America's fastest sprinters.
