SpreadBets re-launched their website after a comprehensive revamp of the service, in a bid to improve accessibility and navigation as well as the general layout of the site.

The website facilitates investors looking to keep up to date on the latest developments in the financial markets. The site has sections on the latest financial news, broker tips, information on a range of spread betting companies and much more.

James White, spokesperson for the site, says that the service was redesigned to ensure that spread bettors get the most out of the information that the site currently offers. "We like to think that at www.SpreadBets.org.uk we offer a range of services and have cemented ourselves as one of the most comprehensive sites around for traders looking to financial spread bet.

"We aim to facilitate any level of speculator, from the novice investor right up to the most experienced of traders, who are looking to trade on the financial markets. With the new redesign in place, it is now easier than ever to access the rich content that we offer which, as ever, is completely free of charge."

The site has information on a range of markets, from forex to stock markets, commodities to equities. It also offers information on the latest spread betting offers, financial charts, spread trading trends and 24 hour trading.

The re-designed website is just one of many improvements to the service that has taken place in recent months; SpreadBets recently added a trading tips section. Updated daily, the tips section shows a comprehensive list of shares that have been upgraded or downgraded by brokers.

Regular user of <http://www.spreadbets.org.uk/> should not be concerned however. The redesign was implemented with its existing users in mind and all of the regular daily content is still available.

Mr White added: "We are dedicated to improving the simplicity, accessibility and choice for all of our users. We will continue to listen to customer feedback in order to improve the service in any way possible."

About SpreadBets.org.uk

SpreadBets.org.uk is a financial spread trading site that offers news on a broad range of financial markets, market data, market commentary and a range of other spread betting information.

Unlike with other forms of financial trading, spread trading allows you to speculate on the financial markets to go in both directions; up and down. This means that you can benefit from a falling market as well as a rising one. Certain spread trading firms also offer traders the opportunity to speculate on the markets 24 hours a day.

However it is vital to realise that financial spread trading does carry a high level of risk; you can in fact lose more than your initial stake. It, therefore, may not be suitable for all speculators. Make sure that, if you are considering spread betting, you understand all of the risks involved. Seek professional financial advice if necessary.
