This family friendly comedy show includes many of the characters Red Skelton created in his successful 20 year run on television. Red Skelton was a pioneer of that golden age bringing laughter and joy to millions of Americans.

This Las Vegas comedy show holds true to the values of Red Skelton. No profanity allowed. Red believed that the use of vulgarities was shortcut to creativity. It's easy to shock people into laughter with a four letter word or subject matter that goes below the belt.

True comedy is the use of a premise, setup and delivery which is why Red could make people of all ages and backgrounds laugh until your belly hurts. He also used characters he created to assist in making the situation even funnier.

One of Red's most famous characters was the hobo who lived in the city dump, Freddie the Freeloader. Freddie was a down and out fellow who had nothing but didn't seem to care because in his heart he felt like he had everything he needed.

Starting Tuesday April, 19th 2011 'Remembering Red a Tribute to Red Skelton' starring Brian Hoffman will be performing Monday and Tuesday afternoons at 2pm inside the showroom of The Westin Casuarina Las Vegas Hotel Casino and Spa located on Flamingo, just a few steps away from the famous Las Vegas Strip.
