

Faceafrika - New Social Networking Platform for Africa and African Diaspora

New social networking platform launched to connect Africans at home and abroad. To build business relationships and serve African communities all over the world.

August 3, 2011 (FPRC) -- Faceafrika is pleased to announce the first social networking site dedicated to Africa and the African Diaspora. Faceafrika.com is a fresh and unique way for Africans to link up and includes business marketing, picture and video sharing, chat and event publicity.

More than just social networking, Faceafrika.com offers an African online business directory as well as tools to help businesses and customers interact and ways to improve buying experiences.

“We are very excited about Faceafrika.com,” said Thomas Osei and Collins Udolu, the founders of Faceafrika. “The potential for social networking and business in Africa is huge and our dedicated site for Africans to connect, socialize and do business is a great step forward in realising that potential.”

As globalization threatens to rob the world of its cultures, languages and traditions it is important for Africa to offer its unique blend of history and culture to an online and connected world. Faceafrika.com brings African social networking to the forefront and allows Africans, regardless of their current location, to discover friends, family and business opportunities.

About Faceafrika.com

Faceafrika.com is the brainchild of Thomas Osei and Collins Udolu who have a vision for linking Africans all over the world, not only socially, but also for business and commerce. As a privately funded venture Thomas and Collins are committed to fulfilling their vision for a connected diaspora using the best social networking technology.
