Financial trading website Spread-Betting.org launches a brand new forex section

October 5, 2011 (FPRC) -- Leading financial trading website Spread-Betting.org has launched a brand new section focussing on forex spread betting. The site, which focuses on the financial derivative of spread betting, says that the latest improvements are part of an ongoing drive to develop www.Spread-Betting.org.

The new section, forex spread betting, focuses on the latest developments in the foreign exchange markets from across the world.

"The forex market is the largest market in the world," said Maxine Price, editor at Spread-Betting.org, "Over $4 trillion is traded in the forex markets every day. To put that into context, that's nearly twice the value of the UK's gross domestic product. It really is big business.

"And with spread betting getting more and more popular, we felt that now was the right time to launch an extensive guide that focuses purely on forex spread betting. We wanted this new section to be the most comprehensive source of information for any spread trader who is looking to speculate on foreign exchange rates."

The new section is split up into several parts. The daily market review gives an overview of the latest market news and covers the most significant developments in the market. The forex spread betting comparison sub-section looks at which companies offer which forex markets, and includes a comparison of spread sizes and minimum stake.

The less experienced spread bettors will not be left behind however. The new guide also includes a basic introduction to spread betting, answering questions such as 'What are the benefits of spread betting?' and 'What factors can influence the forex market?' And, just in case that wasn't enough, there are also worked trading examples for buying and selling forex pairs.

"We already offer a range of guides covering stocks and commodities. This is the latest addition to the site however it won't be the last; we're always on the lookout for ways to improve our service."
