

Raphael Will Show the Power of the Voice in Madrid from 30 November to 4 December 2011

The popular pop singer Raphael is to play a series of concerts in Madrid.

October 18, 2011 (FPRC) -- The venue is the Teatro Compac Gran Via, which is fast becoming a well-known venue for concerts of this type and is easily reached from all parts of the city.

The concerts will take place over five nights, from the 30th November to the 4th December, each starting at 8.30pm. Fans are expected to travel from all over the region, so tickets should be arranged as soon as possible.

There are many Madrid city centre hotels located near to the venue and many more spread around the city for those who would prefer to stay a little further away. There is accommodation to suit all tastes and budgets, from the most basic to the most luxurious; the hotels in Madrid can accommodate every need.

Lek Boonlert, DirectRooms.com Head of Marketing, has suggested that those travelling into the city for the concerts are advised to book their accommodation well in advance of travelling. This is to ensure there is no disappointment on arrival, as accommodation in the city is sure to be booked up very quickly.

There is an efficient public transport system within the city and surrounding areas, making it ideal for sightseeing and travelling to and from the concerts.
