

GreenWorld BVI Brings Australian Farmland Investment to the Retail Market

GreenWorld's Australia farmland investment allows investors to benefit both from the inexpensive price of Australian farmland as well as large Chinese investments in Australian farmland

November 21, 2011 (FPRC) -- As China continues to accumulate massive currency reserves, it is buying up every hard asset they can, from oil and gas to farmland investments and agriculture investments.

One place China has been extremely active is in buying up farmland in Australia in huge quantities. GreenWorld BVI has capitalized on this trend with its Australia farmland investment. Located in western Australia in the heart of the Australian wheatbelt, GreenWorld's farming investment focuses on wheat which has been on a consistent upward climb for nearly one decade.

Josh Cohn, Partner at GreenWorld, noted that GreenWorld's Australia farmland investment was an indirect play on China's breakneck global search for food security as GreenWorld's investment is poised to increase in value as China continues to purchase farmland in Australia.

Furthermore, Cohn noted that farmland in Europe and the UK was at least 15 times more expensive than farmland in Australia. "Whilst Australian farmland is dryer than that of Europe, and hence will have lower yields, the price is so much lower than farmland in Europe that cost advantage to investors in Australian farmland is quite dramatic," stated Cohn. Hence, we believe we have discovered an investment that provides tremendous value for our clients."

Cohn noted that GreenWorld's Australian farmland investment targeted a 9% annual income from the sale of the wheat crop, and also possesses substantial upside potential in capital value due to its rock-bottom price compared to European and English farmland.

"Furthermore," stated Cohn, "this is a purely passive investment directed at retail investors. There are no ongoing fees or management responsibilities whatsoever. So it is a simple, easy to purchase, pure play on the 'agriculture 'supercycle' that is designed to make things easy for individual investors."

GreenWorld currently offers the following opportunities to individual investors. For UK investors, all of GreenWorld's products are SIPP eligible investment:

- Bamboo investments
- Timber Investments
- Farmland Investments
- International Property Investments in Emerging Markets Hotels
- Renewable Energy Investments
- Carbon Credit Investments
