

Classical Fans Head for Cheltenham in January 2012

Classical music fans will be heading for the spa town of Cheltenham in January to enjoy a performance by one of the UK's most popular and best-loved orchestras - The Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra.

December 6, 2011 (FPRC) -- Cheltenham Town Hall will be hosting the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra for a prestigious live performance on January 28th 2012, prompting leading online hotel booking specialist DirectRooms.com to warn that getting a Cheltenham hotel around that time may be tougher than usual.

The Cheltenham concert forms part of the country-wide tour being undertaken by The Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra, and the ensemble is expected to play to packed houses throughout the land.

Classical fans have been enjoying the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra for over one hundred years, since its founding way back in 1893. Leading the orchestra at their Cheltenham Town Hall concert will be Kirill Karabits, the master conductor who has been in place with the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra since 2007.

Concert tickets are still available and can be bought online, with prices from as little as £5. Attendees can expect to hear such famous classical works as Weber's Oberon Overture, Dvorak's Cello Concerto in B Minor and Symphony No. 5 by Sibelius.

Lek Boonlert, marketing head of hotel room website DirectRooms.com, comments, 'Cheltenham is quite a popular place with tourists at all times of year, so with the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra being in town hotels could be at a premium in January. Our advice is to book well ahead and be sure you don't miss out or risk paying too much.'
