

Kuwait Welcomes Petrochemical Professionals to Town in February 2012

Hundreds of petrochemical engineers and oil industry technology specialists will be heading into Kuwait from all over the Middle East to take part in the conference, which runs from February 19th to February 22nd 2012.

December 8, 2011 (FPRC) -- Booking a hotel in Kuwait city centre this coming February will be harder than ever according to online hotel room comparator DirectRooms.com, as the Downstream Technology Conference makes for Kuwait.

The latest technological and research developments for the oil and petrochemical industries will be on show at the Downstream Technology Conference. Procurement executives and R&D specialists will in particular be drawn to the event to learn about the latest developments from leading suppliers.

On the agenda for the Downstream Technology Conference in 2012 will be subjects such as the latest fuel maximisation techniques and tools, environmental sessions on gas emissions and smart investing – how to increase ROI.

The conference will boast many expert presenters from the industry, including Dr. Radu Valdea, Research Professor at the Abu Dhabi Petroleum Institute, Professor L. Petrov, Head of SABIC Chair in the Catalysis department at King Abdul Aziz University and Dr. Dawoud Bahzad, Research Scientist at the Kuwait institute for scientific research (KISR).

Lek Boonlert, marketing head of DirectRooms.com, comments, 'Executives from all over the Middle East will be heading to Kuwait in huge numbers to enjoy the Downstream Technology Conference in February 2012. Hotels in the vicinity of the event venue will be in high demand so we do advise advance booking for anyone wanting to stay close to the action.'
