

Sassy Scrubs Fills a Unique Security Need for the Treasure Hunters Roadshow

The hit TV show, Treasure Hunters Roadshow, finds a new treasure: Sassy Scrubs. The two companies worked together to solve a unique security situation facing the staff at THR.

December 8, 2011 (FPRC) -- Penn Yan, NY -- Treasure Hunters Roadshow, the popular television show that turns your old gold and silver jewelry and coins and antiques into cash, recently contacted Sassy Scrubs, a Finger Lakes, NY based e-commerce Company and custom uniform manufacturer, requesting their help in filling a unique need for their company.

As seen on TV, Treasure Hunters Roadshow (also known as THR) travels throughout the U.S. and Canada hosting over 3,000 shows each year. At these shows, people can bring their collectables in for the show's representatives to examine, after which, hopefully, they will be made a cash offer that can be paid on the spot. The collectibles that this company purchases include coins, gold, silver, jewelry, watches, antiques, toys, trains, dolls, military items, swords, guitars and other instruments. Once a show is over, THR staff takes all of their new valuables back to their warehouse in Springfield, IL to be sorted and examined.

This presents a unique security situation for THR staff. Because of the value, and often small size, of the items they have collected, THR requires their staff to wear uniforms that have no pockets. THR discovered that Sassy Scrubs was a perfect match to their needs because of Sassy Scrubs' ability to custom design uniforms when no other scrubs company would, or could. THR needed specialized scrub sets to be made for their staff in a variety of colors and sizes. The staff at THR was so thrilled with their first custom order of Sassy Scrubs, that the Company promptly placed another order for all of their warehouse staff. It appears Treasure Hunters Roadshow has collected a new treasure.... Sassy Scrubs.
