August 5, 2007 (FPRC) -- In the last few years, there has been a proliferation of online casting & entertainment sites springing up all over the Internet. While some of these are legitimate sites, many are just 'wannabe' sites that don't begin to provide the services you need to start or further your career in acting, modeling, singing, dancing, or entertainer of any kind. Worse yet, many sites are just scams that will take your money and provide absolutely no value in return. We've discovered sites that claim to have talent search engines (which is what casting directors, agents, etc. use to find the talent they're looking for) and found these so-called search engines don't actually work! Many sites claim to have a lot of members, but when you do an actual search, very few people are actually found. Worst of all; many sites have a serious track record of complaints with the Better Business Bureau.

So how do you tell the difference between a legitimate casting site that will give you real value, and a "wannabe" or scam site? Here's a good place to start: ask a few important questions before joining any online casting site!

Go to the following link where you'll discover the key questions you should ask before joining an online talent and casting site.
