

Busbaby.com Announces Availability of Inauguration Charter Buses and Hotel Rooms

The sheer volume of American's wishing to take part in the historic inauguration of President-elect Barack Obama in our nation's capitol, has placed an enormous demand on the transportation and hospitality industries. Busbaby.com, a premiere charter bus travel agency, announces affordable charter bus service and hotel accommodations in an effort to provide access to all Americans.

November 11, 2008 (FPRC) -- Busbaby.com announced today that they have much sought after, charter bus availability and hotel rooms for those travelling to the U. S. Presidential Inauguration, in Washington D.C., on January 20, 2009.

With estimates of over one million visitors converging on the nation's capitol to witness the historic swearing in ceremony of President-elect Barack Obama, groups of attendees are finding charter bus availability scarce at best. Hotel accommodations in the surrounding areas are even harder to find, with budget hotels charging in excess of $450 per room and requiring a 4 night minimum. Enter Busbaby.com, with bus and hotel availability at reasonable prices.

Asked how Busbaby.com is able to provide charter bus transportation and hotel rooms at much lower rates, Orlandus Thomas, Busbaby.com CEO, explains it this way; "This is not your typical inauguration event, this is an event of monumental historic impact. Our commitment is to make participation in this history-making event available to every American who desires to be there. We do not see this as an opportunity to over-inflate our prices in an effort to capitalize on this event but, rather an opportunity to give back to our communities by providing access to all."

Mr. Thomas includes one caveat. He urges travelers to make reservations now as the demand for charter buses will soon deplete his availability as well.
