

Can Hollywood Trade Justin Beiber To Argentina For Dannaë Saranich?

Justin Beiber may not know how to act when he leaves the country, but Argentinian actress Dannaë Saranich is pretty comfortable acting in Hollywood as she is cast in her latest film by Perfect Vision Films with exec producer of TV show Nellyville.

December 8, 2014 (FPRC) -- Just as Justin Beiber is summoned back to Argentina to face his day in court for allegedly having his bodyguards beat up a photographer who waited for him outside a nightclub last year, Hollywood welcomes Argentinian actress Dannaë Saranich with open arms.

One of the great perks that comes with being a rich and famous entertainer is the world travel it, getting to experience cultures of different types, and meeting lots of interesting people. But if you don't understand the rules of that culture, you can definitely end up in hot water like Beiber has on multiple occasions – with Argentina being only the latest one he's headed to court for.

On the other hand, Argentinian actress Dannaë Saranich, already working and studying in Los Angeles, seems to be learning the culture of Hollywood much better than Beiber has done in Argentina. Saranich began her acting career in Buenos Aires, Argentina, where she founded three different theatre companies, each of which produced plays with great opening nights. An actress who takes the initiative, Saranich also founded a theatre lab in Buenos Aires to provide a venue for company members to explore their own techniques for becoming great actors.

In addition to her work in the theatre, Saranich completed her first feature film in Buenos Aires just before relocating to Los Angeles. Titled THE TRUTH, this film was directed by French director Pierre Vignaud. In it, Saranich plays the role of Samantha, a filmmaker who starts dating a corrupt artist, only to unmask him over the course of the film.

Since relocating to Los Angeles, Saranich has performed in the musical Rent, for which she went through an intensive audition process that required she prove her skills in acting, singing, and dancing. Shortly thereafter, she played the lead role in a 30-minute film titled WAR BONDS – with plans for the feature version to be shot some time next year.

Most recently, Saranich, has been cast in a film that's to be produced by Perfect Vision Films with the executive producer of the TV show Nellyville.

Saranich's curiosity seems to be one of her most important tools in acting. She exudes a deep sense of aliveness and curiosity as she speaks of how activities like reading, going to museums, listening to live music, going to the theatre, and such all feed her artistic spirit. The opportunity to play different characters, she says, indulges her curiosity and gives her an opportunity to learn about different cultures and to study different aspects of humanity, which she finds "endlessly fascinating." With her coy smile, she also suggests, "... everyone could benefit from taking a few acting classes even if you don't want to be an actor.... It might bring a little more compassion to the world.... who knows?"

Perhaps Beiber could take a few tips from Saranich by taking an interest in what other cultures are about before mouthing off, causing confrontations, and peeing in janitor buckets. Or maybe we should just have more compassion for our famous wayward youth. Who knows.
