

Bob McLean Reports That Now Is The Perfect Time To Sell A Home In Mission, British Columbia

Bob McLean is a real estate agent with over 12 years of experience, and has never seen a better time to sell a home in Mission, BC, according to a new statement made encouraging homeowners to list.

Mission, BC -- October 29, 2015 (FPRC) -- The property market is one that is always fluctuating, both on a macro and micro scale. Small changes to neighborhoods can see property prices soar or topple, while broad market forces can also change the value of a home. The most common cause of home value however is simple supply and demand, and right now in Mission, British Columbia, demand far outstrips supply when it comes to homes. Real estate agent Bob McLean is spreading the news to homeowners, claiming this is the perfect time to list and sell their homes.

Bob McLean is a master at connecting sellers with buyers and getting houses both on and off the market as quickly as possible, listed in the top ten of over two thousand eight hundred members of Landmark Realty, receiving the Landmark Five Star Award for customer experience in the process.

Now, he is encouraging Fraser Valley homeowners to list their properties, as prices are on the up and up and demand is significant, all while supply continues to be low. McLean uses skill, experience and the latest technology to ensure all listings are beautifully represented and as appealing as possible to potential buyers.

A spokesperson for Bob McLean - Personal Real Estate Corporation explained, "Inventory among residential detached homes in Mission, British Columbia have never been lower and prices are continually rising, making it an opportune time to list and sell a home. There is significant buyer demand and very little supply, which means sellers will get a great price for their home. Meanwhile, buyers looking to move to the area can still take advantage of affordable prices before they really take off, making this the perfect time for all parties."
