UB Freight has become part of two major global freight networks and has redesigned its website to better represent them as a global player serving the New Zealand import export market.

Auckland, New Zealand -- (January 12, 2016 (FPRC) -- Freight shipping is essential for the global distribution of goods, and nowhere feels that need more powerfully than New Zealand, thanks to its unique position on the globe. The import and export market in New Zealand is growing, and is being supported by companies like UB Freight Limited, who have gone from strength to strength over the years and are now a bona fide global shipping power based in New Zealand. Their new website has been designed to reflect this global focus.

The new website is beautifully designed to reflect the UB Freight brand, and includes responsive elements that load perfectly on any screen for maximum functionality across any device. The website has also been fully optimized to organically attract individuals searching online for their services.

The new website describes the full suite of services offered, for both personal and commercial shipments of all sizes, with truckload and less than truckload freight shipping options available, together with sea freight and air freight options for reliable delivery. A spokesperson for UB Freight Limited explained, "We still handle internal shipping of all scales, with our fleet of vehicles always on hand and ready to move items on behalf of customers both within and outside New Zealand to any part of the country. The new website has found the right balance between our national and international services, and makes it easy for anyone seeking either service to get the information they need easily and quickly. It will also help new clients discover our services, which will help make 2016 our best year yet."
