

Andersen Construction Celebrates 30 Years as Top SoCal Construction Company

Over the course of three decades, Andersen Construction has built up a reputation as one of region's most reliable and capable residential and commercial construction experts.

Bellflower, CA -- February 1, 2016 (FPRC) -- Andersen Construction celebrates 30 Years as a top Southern California construction company. With construction activity in the state back at healthy levels and still picking up quickly, Andersen Construction stands ready to give residential and commercial clients alike the benefit of its three decades of experience. As part of Andersen Construction's anniversary celebration, its website has been updated with new resources, including guides to important facts about commercial tenant improvement construction and how the Southern California residential construction company can help with home remodeling or building projects.

"We're happy to report that we have reached a real milestone, having first opened our doors thirty years ago now," Andersen Construction representative Scott Andersen said, "It has been an incredible experience for us all, and we'd like to thank everyone we've had the pleasure of working with over the years. Never content to settle for the status quo, we have some big things planned for the future, too, along with maintaining the same quality of service that has allowed us to thrive for so long."

Although California was among the states hardest hit by the nationwide real estate bust that triggered the last recession, construction activity has since embarked upon a healthy recovery. The final figures are not yet in, but it looks likely that single-family new home starts for 2015 will reach a level at least 10% greater than in the year before, with especially strong growth in the latter part of the year.

With a now thirty-year history of providing the best in residential and commercial construction services, Andersen Construction is especially well positioned to lead the present surge of activity in Southern California. A full-service company that oversees and conducts everything from ambitious residential remodeling and building projects to the finishing and improving of commercial spaces for businesses, Andersen Construction has become one of the most highly regarded and prominent companies of its kind in California.

Emphasizing teamwork, quality of service, and complete customer satisfaction with every project, Andersen Construction stands out as one of the state's most reliable and capable construction specialists. As part of the company's anniversary celebration, its website has been updated and augmented with a range of informative guides and articles that will help prospective and existing clients learn more about what Andersen Construction can do for them.

About Andersen Construction:

Living up to its motto of "Quality Service, Customer Satisfaction, and Teamwork" on every project, Andersen Construction is one of Southern California's top builders, serving residential and commercial customers on projects of all kinds.
