

WaveChat launches world-first video invitations

WaveChat has introduced a world-first video invitation feature to make organising parties and events more fun.

May 9, 2016 (FPRC) -- Social chat app, WaveChat, has introduced a world-first video invitation feature to make organising parties and events more fun.

Video is the big social media trend for 2016, with strong uptake of video sharing within the major social media platforms.

Now, WaveChat users can create their own fun video invites for their parties, events and social catchups - making them as crazy and personal as they want!

They can also instantly share what they are doing today via video through the What's Happening feature. This lets you take a 20-second video of what you are doing – it might be a day at the beach, a great bar or a big party – and invite your friends to come along.

WaveChat instantly shares the video with your selected friends and shows them your location on the map, how to get there and who else is going – you don't need to do a thing except take the video!

With WaveChat, everyone at an event can see and share photos and videos in real time, and there is also a unique ETA function which lets you see exactly when your friends are arriving.

WaveChat is a full-featured social app available for both iOS and Android that offers chat, event and calendar organizing, as well as photo and video sharing, with the aim of putting fun and privacy back in your real social life!

What's unique about WaveChat?

- a private way to connect with your friends;
- send out amazing video invitations to all your events and catch-ups;
- events, chat and calendar all in the same place, interacting together;
- everyone at an event can share photos and videos in real time;
- events and all their photos and videos saved in the calendar for the future;
- a unique ETA function which lets you know where your friends are and when they will arrive;
- a What's Happening feature to instantly show your friends where you are and what you are doing by video, and invite them to join you.
