

Kanbanize Announces Major Product Changes

Kanbanize has evolved to provide its clients with absolute company-wide workflow transparency

March 8, 2018 (FPRC) -- The leading Lean management platform Kanbanize has announced a new major product update. With the introduction of Release 6.0, Kanbanize has evolved to provide its clients with absolute company-wide workflow transparency.

At the core of the significant update is a feature called Workflow Designer. It allows users to map precisely different types of workflows on a unified project board by creating unique steps for each flow lane.

Bisser Ivanov, the company's COO, comments, "To incorporate the new workflow designer, the RnD Team spent several months rewriting large parts of the software. We are confident to say that this is the most significant release in the history of Kanbanize. With the embedded Kanban Portfolio Layers, the new workflow designer breaks the typical Kanban board limitations and enables our clients to truly achieve 100% workflow transparency on all levels of organizational hierarchy."

The flagship feature of the release is supported by an improved portfolio management functionality. It changes the initial project board template to include both initiative and card workflows. As a result, projects with multiple levels can be visualized and monitored at a single place.

You can find detailed information about the rest of the new additions to Kanbanize in the dedicated announcement on their website.
